

LEARNING ASSISTANCE

Here, we showcase some of the highlights from the various diagnostics sessions we've attended in recent months.

Regular readers of AVT should now be familiar with Andy Horwat and Mark Clifford. Since the turn of the year, the two diagnostics specialists – and friends of the magazine – have been clocking up the miles visiting colleges up and down the country, sharing their knowledge with the next generation of vehicle technicians.

In a series that started last year at Swindon College, we've accompanied the two technicians on visits to Kingston College, West Herts College and most recently, Basingstoke College of Technology and on each occasion, Pico Technology's PicoScope took centre stage with the pair demonstrating how best to use the diagnostic tool.

info filled sessions

Having already visited back in July 2014, the duo returned to Kingston College in January. But unlike their previous visit, where the learners were in fact tutors from the Motor Vehicle department, this time around was the turn of the Level 3 students. A lot was covered in

